The Boruta Dye Plant, known prior to World War II as "Boruta", is located in Zgierz, north of Lodz. This factory is under army management. It is very difficult for a person to be released from work here and many of the employees become ill after two months of labor. In August 1953, an explosion which was heard a good distance away in Lodz completely ruined the Boruta dye plant. There were fatalities. It is said that the storage tanks were emptied prior to the explosion, or else there would have been many more deaths.
